We acknowledge the people of the Kulin alliance, the original custodians of the land which was never ceded and on which our buildings for worship stand and we gather.

14 December 2025: Advent 3

Christmas Bowl

Our church supports the Christmas Bowl appeal every year.

Around the world, more families than ever are being forced from their homes by conflict and climate disasters. From Gaza to the Pacific, from Ethiopia to Pakistan, people are searching for safety and belonging. Through the Christmas Bowl, our church community can stand alongside them, offering practical support and a powerful reminder that they are not forgotten.

Every gift matters. What you donate, whether large or small, helps meet urgent needs and continues a legacy of compassion. Together, through the Christmas Bowl, we can shine Christ's light into some of the darkest places in our world.

Thank you for your willingness to consider donating.

The Christmas Bowl is the Christmas Appeal of Act for Peace, the international humanitarian agency of the National Council of Churches in Australia. Gifts of $2 and over are tax deductible.

Eko, a farmer in Indonesia, was facing constant devastating floods due to unpredictable weather. This made farming almost impossible. He and his community have been taught new farming methods that have helped them to adapt to the realities of a changing climate.

Please donate by Christmas. Last day of the appeal is Sunday 28th December. (Sandra Savory)

Ways you can donate:

- Use the Christmas Bowl envelopes available at church (for cash, cheque or credit card)—put in offering bowl, or our Christmas Bowl, or post
- Put your cash donation in our own special wooden Christmas Bowl at the back of the church
- Donate online at christmasbowl.actforpeace.org.au Please make sure to donate under our church's name.
- Scan the QR code on the Christmas Bowl posters in the church foyer to go directly to our church's donation page on the website.

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

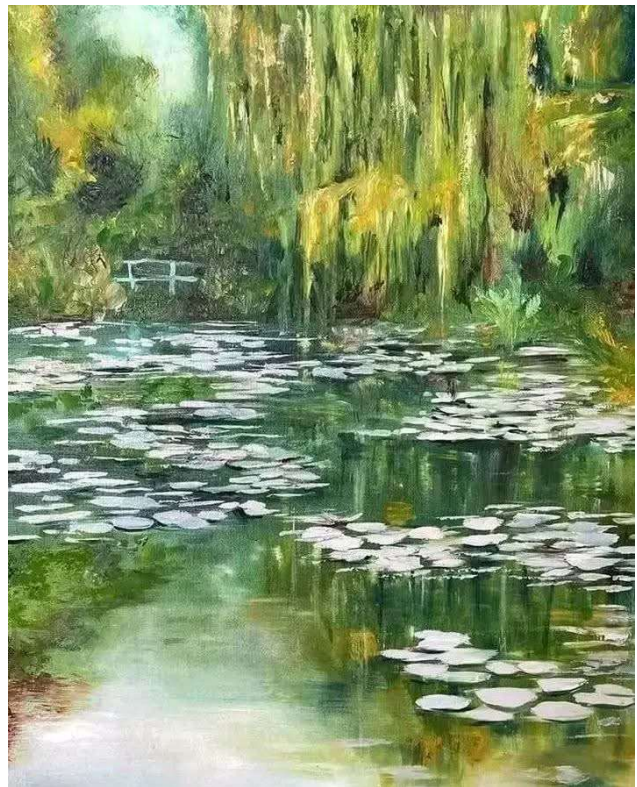

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

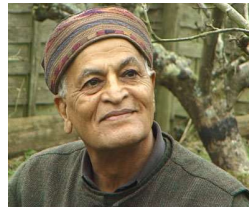

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”

Christmas Bowl

Our church supports the Christmas Bowl appeal every year.

Around the world, more families than ever are being forced from their homes by conflict and climate disasters. From Gaza to the Pacific, from Ethiopia to Pakistan, people are searching for safety and belonging. Through the Christmas Bowl, our church community can stand alongside them, offering practical support and a powerful reminder that they are not forgotten.

Every gift matters. What you donate, whether large or small, helps meet urgent needs and continues a legacy of compassion. Together, through the Christmas Bowl, we can shine Christ's light into some of the darkest places in our world.

Thank you for your willingness to consider donating.

The Christmas Bowl is the Christmas Appeal of Act for Peace, the international humanitarian agency of the National Council of Churches in Australia. Gifts of $2 and over are tax deductible.

Eko, a farmer in Indonesia, was facing constant devastating floods due to unpredictable weather. This made farming almost impossible. He and his community have been taught new farming methods that have helped them to adapt to the realities of a changing climate.

Please donate by Christmas. Last day of the appeal is Sunday 28th December. (Sandra Savory)

Ways you can donate:

- Use the Christmas Bowl envelopes available at church (for cash, cheque or credit card)—put in offering bowl, or our Christmas Bowl, or post
- Put your cash donation in our own special wooden Christmas Bowl at the back of the church
- Donate online at christmasbowl.actforpeace.org.au Please make sure to donate under our church's name.
- Scan the QR code on the Christmas Bowl posters in the church foyer to go directly to our church's donation page on the website.

Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

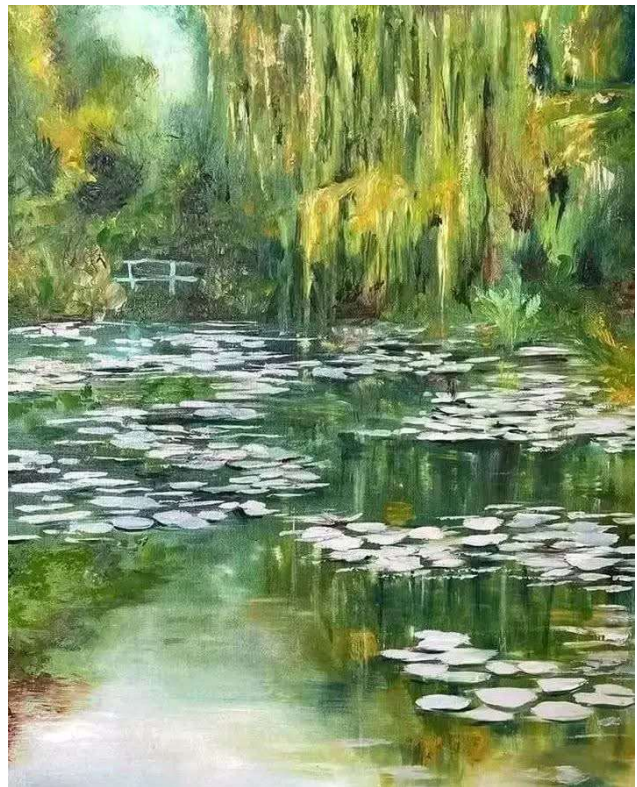

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”

Christmas Bowl

Our church supports the Christmas Bowl appeal every year.

Around the world, more families than ever are being forced from their homes by conflict and climate disasters. From Gaza to the Pacific, from Ethiopia to Pakistan, people are searching for safety and belonging. Through the Christmas Bowl, our church community can stand alongside them, offering practical support and a powerful reminder that they are not forgotten.

Every gift matters. What you donate, whether large or small, helps meet urgent needs and continues a legacy of compassion. Together, through the Christmas Bowl, we can shine Christ's light into some of the darkest places in our world.

Thank you for your willingness to consider donating.

The Christmas Bowl is the Christmas Appeal of Act for Peace, the international humanitarian agency of the National Council of Churches in Australia. Gifts of $2 and over are tax deductible.

Eko, a farmer in Indonesia, was facing constant devastating floods due to unpredictable weather. This made farming almost impossible. He and his community have been taught new farming methods that have helped them to adapt to the realities of a changing climate.

Please donate by Christmas. Last day of the appeal is Sunday 28th December. (Sandra Savory)

Ways you can donate:

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

From Gaza to the Pacific, from Ethiopia to Pakistan, people are searching for safety and belonging. Through the Christmas Bowl, our church community can stand alongside them, offering practical support and a powerful reminder that they are not forgotten.

Every gift matters. What you donate, whether large or small, helps meet urgent needs and continues a legacy of compassion. Together, through the Christmas Bowl, we can shine Christ's light into some of the darkest places in our world.

Thank you for your willingness to consider donating.

The Christmas Bowl is the Christmas Appeal of Act for Peace, the international humanitarian agency of the National Council of Churches in Australia. Gifts of $2 and over are tax deductible.

Eko, a farmer in Indonesia, was facing constant devastating floods due to unpredictable weather. This made farming almost impossible. He and his community have been taught new farming methods that have helped them to adapt to the realities of a changing climate.

Please donate by Christmas. Last day of the appeal is Sunday 28th December. (Sandra Savory)

Ways you can donate:

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

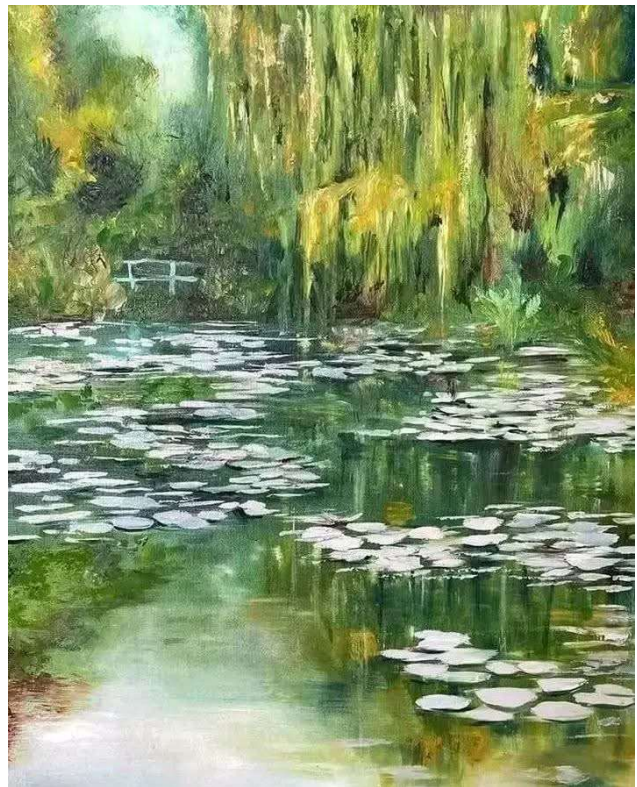

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”

Christmas Bowl

Our church supports the Christmas Bowl appeal every year.

Around the world, more families than ever are being forced from their homes by conflict and climate disasters. From Gaza to the Pacific, from Ethiopia to Pakistan, people are searching for safety and belonging. Through the Christmas Bowl, our church community can stand alongside them, offering practical support and a powerful reminder that they are not forgotten.

Every gift matters. What you donate, whether large or small, helps meet urgent needs and continues a legacy of compassion. Together, through the Christmas Bowl, we can shine Christ's light into some of the darkest places in our world.

Thank you for your willingness to consider donating.

The Christmas Bowl is the Christmas Appeal of Act for Peace, the international humanitarian agency of the National Council of Churches in Australia. Gifts of $2 and over are tax deductible.

Eko, a farmer in Indonesia, was facing constant devastating floods due to unpredictable weather. This made farming almost impossible. He and his community have been taught new farming methods that have helped them to adapt to the realities of a changing climate.

Please donate by Christmas. Last day of the appeal is Sunday 28th December. (Sandra Savory)

Ways you can donate:

- Use the Christmas Bowl envelopes available at church (for cash, cheque or credit card)—put in offering bowl, or our Christmas Bowl, or post
- Put your cash donation in our own special wooden Christmas Bowl at the back of the church
- Donate online at christmasbowl.actforpeace.org.au Please make sure to donate under our church's name.
- Scan the QR code on the Christmas Bowl posters in the church foyer to go directly to our church's donation page on the website.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

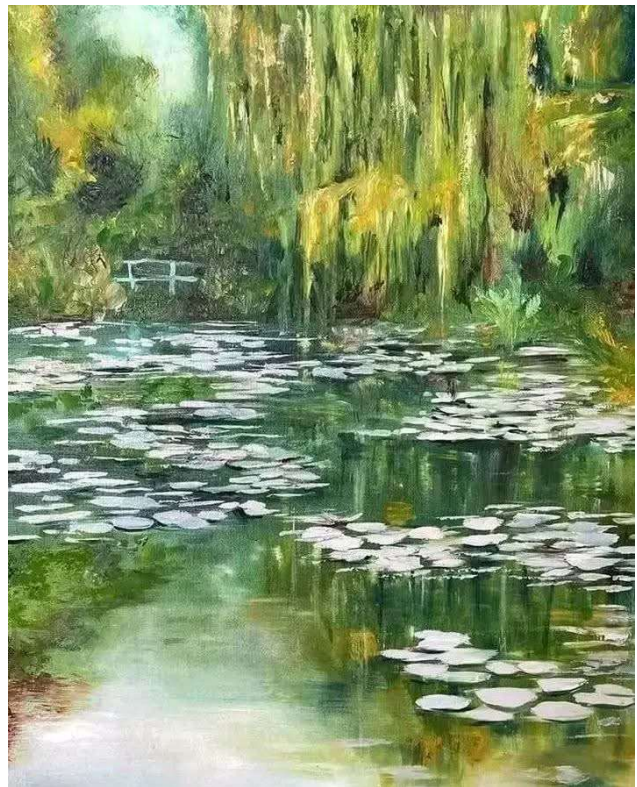

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”

Christmas Bowl

Our church supports the Christmas Bowl appeal every year.

Around the world, more families than ever are being forced from their homes by conflict and climate disasters. From Gaza to the Pacific, from Ethiopia to Pakistan, people are searching for safety and belonging. Through the Christmas Bowl, our church community can stand alongside them, offering practical support and a powerful reminder that they are not forgotten.

Every gift matters. What you donate, whether large or small, helps meet urgent needs and continues a legacy of compassion. Together, through the Christmas Bowl, we can shine Christ's light into some of the darkest places in our world.

Thank you for your willingness to consider donating.

The Christmas Bowl is the Christmas Appeal of Act for Peace, the international humanitarian agency of the National Council of Churches in Australia. Gifts of $2 and over are tax deductible.

Eko, a farmer in Indonesia, was facing constant devastating floods due to unpredictable weather. This made farming almost impossible. He and his community have been taught new farming methods that have helped them to adapt to the realities of a changing climate.

Please donate by Christmas. Last day of the appeal is Sunday 28th December. (Sandra Savory)

Ways you can donate:

- Use the Christmas Bowl envelopes available at church (for cash, cheque or credit card)—put in offering bowl, or our Christmas Bowl, or post

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Satish Kumar

Reading Disarming Times, the December 2025 publication of Pax Christi, I came across this story by Fr Claude Mostowik that I thought was worth repeating. (Ed.)

In 1962, Satish Kumar and a companion set off from India on a peace walk that took him to Moscow, Paris, London and Washington DC as well as the mountains of Afghanistan, the deserts of Iran, along the Black Sea, through the frigid Russian winter, and a politically divided Germany. He covered a remarkable distance without a single rupee. He wanted to journey from Mahatma Gandhi's grave to Washington until he discovered that John F. Kennedy has been assassinated in the meantime and thus wanted to go to his grave. People of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas offered hospitality to these two curious young Indian men. Satish chanted over and over the Sanskrit dictum 'so hum' (you are, therefore I am), a recognition of the ultimate connectedness of all things.

These two young Indians were offered hospitality by people of all ethnicities, religions, classes and dogmas.

When people realize that in all the diversity and differences we see of nationalities, of religions, of cultures, of languages, are all beautiful diversities, they are superficial. Deep down we share the same humanity, the global humanity.

Kumar went through many different cultures—Muslim religion, Jewish religion, Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Russians, Americans, European, Asians, Blacks, Whites, Browns, Socialists, Communists. When one digs deep, and touch the humanity, the same humanity is everywhere. But to discover that unity, one must be free of prejudice. He said that if he went waving the Indian flag, he would have met a Pakistani. If he went proclaiming Hinduism as the supreme religion, he would meet a Christian or a Muslim proclaiming that he got it wrong. If he went as a Socialist, he would have met a capitalist. If he went as a brown man, he would have met a black man or white man. I went as a human being; I met only human beings.

From Wikipedia (by Luke Hancock)

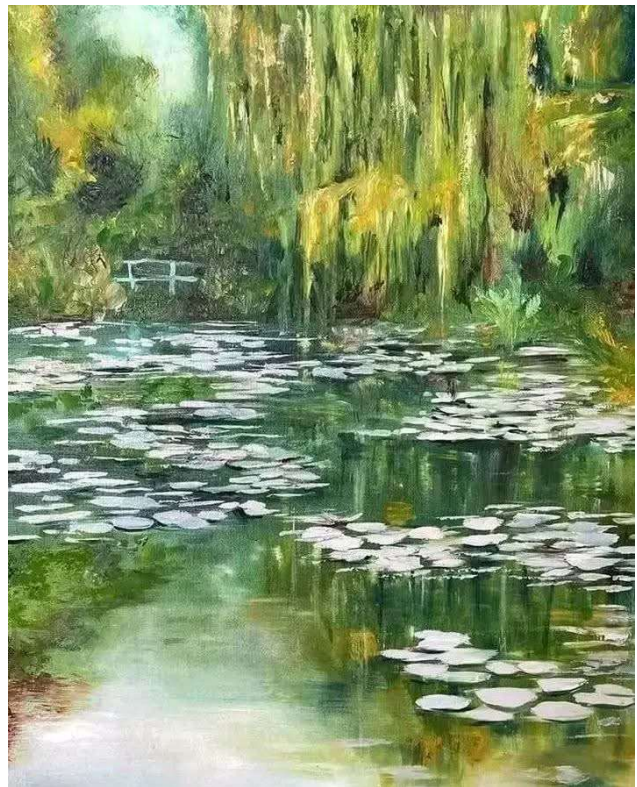

Satish Kumar (born 9 August 1936) is an Indian British activist and speaker. He has been a Jain monk, nuclear disarmament advocate and pacifist. Now living in England, Kumar is founder and Director of Programmes of the Schumacher College international centre for ecological studies, and is Editor Emeritus of Resurgence & Ecologist magazine. His most notable accomplishment is the completion, together with a companion, E. P. Menon, of a peace walk of over 8,000 miles in June 1962 for two and a half years, from New Delhi to Moscow, Paris, London, and Washington, D.C., the capitals of the world's earliest nuclear-armed countries. He insists that reverence for nature should be at the heart of every political and social debate.

Defending criticism that his goals are unrealistic, he has said,

“Look at what realists have done for us. They have led us to war and climate change, poverty on an unimaginable scale, and wholesale ecological destruction. Half of humanity goes to bed hungry because of all the realistic leaders in the world. I tell people who call me "unrealistic" to show me what their realism has done. Realism is an outdated, overplayed and wholly exaggerated concept.”
